

These eight simple words combine to ask two very simple questions, but the message behind these words makes the questions very profound. They are an outright call to action, an impetus to do something, perhaps, an everyday task, a small change in attitude, a creative effort, a herculean task. Indeed the questions are a call to become part of something bigger than yourself, to go forth and change the world.

IF NOT YOU WHO?

Now is the time and today is the day to make a start at anything we desire. As young people, we can shape our tomorrow by acting today. We have the ability to positively change the communities we live in . The greatest pioneers of change throughout the centuries have been those who were organized in pursuing their goals, those who meticulously planned and executed their everyday tasks and found time to spearhead change. Abdul Kalam had to first be a disciplined scientist, slogging away in a space centre to eventually become a President who inspired the young people of India.

IF NOT NOW WHEN?

We have the power to change the world, which has to be combined with a desire, a plan and self-discipline. Do you have a desire, do you have a goal? Do you have a plan of action? Are your mundane tasks methodically organized? Then, and only then, you are prepared to become an agent of change. So let me ask you again if not you, who? If not now, when?

May the blessing of the Lord Almighty be with you in this journey of yours.
